An earth house is a new kind of home. You can find it in Switzerland. It is under the ground, so it looks like a cave or a fairy house. Why do people build earth house? It is because earth houses can save energy in many ways. First, an earth house is built in the earth and has mud walls. So it stays warm in winter and cool in summer. Second, the bathroom has roof windows. Plenty of natural light comes in through the window. Also, an earth house has grass on the roof. You can grow many plants and pretty flowers there. Isn't it great?

Wilbur and Orville Wright loved to invent things. They attended school regularly, but learned about science and mechanics from reading and working with tools. In 1892 they decided to go into business together. They opened a shop in Dayton, Ohio. In that shop they rented, sold, and built bicycles. At about this time, a man named Otto Lilienthal was working on trying to find a way for human beings to fly. Lilienthal was killed while he was trying to fly a glider in 1896. The Wright Brothers decided to continue with his experiments of trying to find a way to fly. They began to test double-winged gliders in 1900. They designed, built and tested over two hundred models to determine the best wing design. Finally, they designed one on which the pilot would lie down flat on his stomach. They tested their design one thousand times over three years on the sand dunes near Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. During this time they were becoming very good pilots. On December 17, 1903, Orville and Wilbur Wright wheeled the new invention onto a beach at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. Powered by a small engine, the airplane coasted across the sand, lifted off, and flew a total of 36.5 meters into the air before landing. Orville and Wilbur Wright are remembered as the "fathers of flight". Today, the beach at Kitty Hawk is a national historical monument.
