GOING DOWN

[P1] Eight million people live in London and a lot of them want bigger houses to live in. Walk around the streets of London and what can you see? Hundreds of houses and flats. Many buildings have got windows in their roofs because people often create an extra room under the roof. For lots of families, there's a bedroom and sometimes an extra bathroom below the roof of their house.

[P2] But people don't only go up, they also go down. Some old houses in London have a *cellar. A cellar isn't usually a very nice room - it's under the house and it can be cold and wet. But builders can change cellars and turn them into nice, warm rooms. The new room is often a kitchen or a dining room. This isn't a very new idea, but having a room under your garden is!

[P3] Underground rooms are one answer to the small house problem in London. Mr and Mrs Dunsmore in South London explain: 'Our house has got three bedrooms and we've got three children - Matt (17), Sophie (15) and Ben (10). The boys stay in the same room, but it's very small for them. Matt has got school tasks and important exams next year, so he needs a quiet place to study. He doesn't want a 10-year-old with him.'

[P4] Who found the idea to build rooms under the garden? 'I did!' says Mrs Dunsmore, 'The new rooms are nearly finished. There's a toilet, a small bathroom and a bedroom with a bed, a desk and a few chairs. And, how does Matt feel? He says: 'I'm happy that I'm going to have my own room.'

8. Many people in London want _____.
A. a beautiful, new house
B. to live in the countryside
C. to live in a different city
D. more and bigger rooms
9. _____ isn't/aren't sharing a room in the Dunsmore family at the moment.

C. The father
D. The mother

B. spend time with friends
C. do homework and study
D. share with his brother
